- 09:39:43 From Joshua Gran : I'm sorry. I was late coming to today's presentation. Not sure I missed it, but what do you think are the most important trainings to provide teen call takers?
- 09:40:10 From Brandon W : I think there is a space where we can highlight the impact of others without comparing it or contrasting it or even comparing it in a sense of competition with other service providers (I'll put them up against...) I think one of the hardest struggles of implementing peer services and teen services is this feeling of conflict and divide. For the longest times mutual aid was not allowed because traditional mental health practices said "we don't know enough" and it became a compare and contrast of services, rather than looking it as an alternative or another approach, nothing better or worse, just different. Feeling compelled as a Peer to call us in to not continue to divide or silo different services.

- 09:52:40 From Courtney Gallo Hunter (she/her) : Today's awesome youth-led session reminds me to send this action alert to encourage legislators to pass the Improving Mental Health for Students Act, which would put 988, Crisis Text Line, and a campus suicide resource on the back of student IDs for higher education institutions: <https://act.crisistextline.org/a/co-sponsor-improving-mental-health-access-students-act>
- 09:52:40 From Angeline Anselme : Best Practices for Peers fireach category and population.
- 09:52:57 From Angeline Anselme : for each
- 09:53:24 From Angeline Anselme : Also Senior/ and or Disabled.
- 09:53:29 From Nikki Kontz, Teen Lifeline (she/her) : Replying to "For the teen lines, ..." Our average length of call is about 22 minutes, texting is about 2 hours. As with any crisis service, most of our callers really are looking for someone who will listen, is interested in their life, and validation of feelings. We find most of them know what they want to have happen and our counselors are there to listen and help them find their next steps.
- 09:53:52 From Morgan Leets (she/her) : Replying to "For the teen lines, ..." Average times can be challenging to say, as it depends on the topic a person reaches out about, and also the medium they reach out on (call/ text/ chat). Often, a nonjudgmental and caring space to share their stories is one of the most important things for connection and collaboration. Would love to talk more about this if you want to reach out! youthl@linesforlife.org
