The Heart of Field Mediation

| Principles and Practices of Crisis Responders | Principles of Field Mediation to incorporate into practices Inspired by Transformative Conflict Theory |
|---|--|
| ★ Be flexible and adaptive | → Be comfortable in the midst of conflict. |
| ★ Use de-escalation to lower the temperature of a crisis | → Conceptualize conflict as an opportunity to improve interpersonal relationships |
| ★ Build rapport and connection | → Hold neutrality and empathy. |
| ★ Use active listening, empathize | → Support direct communication - avoid carrying messages between disputing parties |
| ★ Understand the impact and presentation of trauma in crisis settings | → Resist being directive, problem-solving, or inserting your goals over theirs. |

Lessons in LE/Mobile Collaboration

| Principles for Civilian Response & LE | How it Worked in Dayton |
|---|--|
| Paradoxically, less LE involvement requires a closer relationship with LE | Trust built enabled self-dispatching, radios, MDTs, and referrals; Maintained trust through a consistent response. |
| Involve all response organizations in the Design, Training, and Launch | Working Group (DMC, LE, EMS, 911, City): This happens with you, not to you. |
| Avoiding "othering" also applies to attending to our attitude towards LE | Respect ways in which LE has a valuable role in our public service systems |
| There are some things Crisis Response has to learn from LE | Situational awareness, legal requirements |
| There are some ways of being we do not want to share with LE | Worst-case scenario mindset vs. connection as focus |
